Atrial fibrillation (AF) is the most common sustained cardiac arrhythmia in clinical practice. The clinical significance of AF in patients with coronary artery disease undergoing percutaneous coronary intervention (PCI) remains unclear. We retrospectively analyzed the clinical and angiographic characteristics of 6,076 patients undergoing PCI from July 2007 to April 2011 and found 551 (9%) patients had AF during PCI. Cardiac troponin I (cTnI) levels and the incidence of the subacute coronary syndrome were significantly higher in patients with AF than in those without AF. In patients with stable coronary artery disease, patients with AF had significantly more stenosis of the target vessels. Patients with AF had a higher incidence of acute procedural complications, such as major bleeding, new-onset left ventricular (LV) systolic dysfunction, cardiac tamponade, stroke, heart failure, and ventricular tachycardia/fibrillation. Multivariate analysis showed that AF (odds ratio [OR] 2.129, 95% confidence interval [CI] 1.575-2.862), age (OR 1.074, 95% CI 1.028-1.122), male sex (OR 1.305, 95% CI 1.044-1.620), hypertension (OR 1.427, 95% CI 1.085-1.880), heart failure (OR 1.732, 95% CI 1.116-2.693), history of myocardial infarction (OR 1.321, 95% CI 1.005-1.731), and number of vessels with more than 70% stenosis (OR 1.644, 95% CI 1.246-2

Iriun Webcam

The goal of this project was to create a new type of webcam by using multiple cameras from different models of smartphone. A full-fledged desktop application was used to store all the information (resolution, quality, etc.) from each camera and serve as a website for users to share this information. We will refer to this type of webcam as a Multi-Camera Webcam. Developed by QUD. Supported by the following companies: Raspberry PI Note: USB cable with external power supply is needed to use this device This Multi-Camera Webcam can be used with any type of webcam. Supported Platforms: Windows+0.35(+0.37%) -1.61(-0.13%) +81.58(+0.37%) A seat to watch: a growing list of 2020 presidential contenders LAS VEGAS – As part of the campaign trail, the presumptive Democratic presidential nominee is making her rounds. Bernie Sanders, the only Democrat with an actual shot at winning, is hitting the trail. Meanwhile, the crowded field of Democratic presidential hopefuls is rushing to the early states of Iowa and New Hampshire. And on Tuesday, the first major contest of the 2020 campaign is set to take place in Nevada. The demographics of the Democratic electorate in the state are extremely diverse. More than one in five Nevada residents is Latino, nearly half the population has only a high school diploma, and about one in 10 lives in poverty. "Nevada is an incredibly diverse state," said Stephen Cloobeck, a professor at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. "There are issues there that are very important to people in the state." Nevada's demographic profile has significant implications for the 2020 election. The state's voters tend to lean left on a number of issues, including opposing the death penalty, legalizing recreational marijuana and protecting the environment. That, combined with the state's robust Latino population, means it's likely to be an important battleground, in addition to being a trailblazer when it comes to issues like legalizing marijuana. With such a diverse population, Nevada offers not just a demographic point of contrast for the next president, but a wealth of potential allies. The coalition of Latinos and African-Americans that elected Barack Obama in 2008 and 2012 could be a powerful force for Democrats this election cycle. Nevada has historically
