jollyphonicspupilbook3download Q: Call two functions with delay to start a function in JavaScript This is the first time I ask a question here, I am sorry if I make any error. I have two functions: function closeAfterSecond(functionB) { setTimeout(functionB, 1000); } And this is the second function: function fadeIn() { $("#page").fadeIn(100); } I want my two functions to start one function with delay of one second and then to call the next function, but with delay of one second to start function fadeIn. How can I do this? Thanks! A: You could call closeAfterSecond() inside your function: $(function () { function fadeIn() { $("#page").fadeIn(100); closeAfterSecond(fadeIn); } closeAfterSecond(fadeIn); }); The innovation Bixby functionality is available on the following premium smartphones by Samsung: Galaxy S7, S7 Edge, Galaxy S6, and Galaxy Note5. In the future, Bixby will be available to other devices. Furthermore, Bixby software will be available on mobile phones and other devices. Starts at a price of $6 per month, users can purchase additional Bixby services. Users will be charged $0.15 for use of Bixby Routines and Routines Plus, $0.15 for enhanced Bixby topic suggestions, $0.2 for Bixby Privacy, $1 for using facial expressions, and $0.2 for a Bixby voice command recording. Privacy concern for Samsung According to Venture Beat, people have different concern with the features of Bixby Voice. Many people want to keep their device in their pocket. However, when the Bixby is on with Voice enabled, the device will record your voice and analyze it to get more information about you. Thus, the concern lies in the privacy of the device.
