This program is a project designed to investigate whether the methods used in adolescent students at a high school are ethical. They also set out to identify the influence and effect of Internet usage on academic performance, by allowing all students to access the Internet at school. The application runs as an executable and a screensaver that has only a few options that are determined by the choices of the student. The program creates a group that allows students to collaborate on the application and decide together what the results should be. For the group, the program develops four different activities for them to work on. These activities include a survey and a discussion, where they are able to collect data on the students and what they think. They are also able to interview the students in an informational setting and interview the teacher and any faculty advisors. In addition to this, the students are asked to play a game to see if they would be able to get the most points. Students who are choosing to participate in the project are able to sign up for the group with a key that is given to them by the teacher and after that they are able to work on the four activities together. Another factor of the program is the amount of homework that students have to do. The program has two different homework environments that students can choose from. One of them is a scenario that looks like a real day in school where students have to use the information that they gathered for their research, and present it to the group. The other homework assignment is a new homework environment where the group is split into four teams. Each team has a survey where students can comment and comment on the results of the other teams surveys. The final factor is the influence of the Internet on the students in school. The program looks at Internet usage in school by having students keep a daily record of their Internet usage for seven days. This will show how much time they spend on the Internet, how often they spend time on the Internet, and the types of websites they are visiting.
