Tuesday, January 26, 2016 In May 2000, I took a canoe trip to explore the North Fork of the Flathead Lake. I left Choteau with a buddy, "Denny", who was on the Way-Too-Far-Thing expedition, before Denny went to prison and started to work on that. It was a great trip. We had a great time and saw a lot of the flat head country, while camping and day-hiking. The trip started with us jumping ship from the Maiden's Cruise in Two Harbors to the North Fork in Choteau (pictured above). We stayed with a group of guys and their mother, who lived in a cabin way out west. As we set out on the adventure, we realized how little we knew about paddling a canoe. All we had was our Spry Kayak and the paddling lessons that Kenny had given us. We decided to take out a canoe from the Choteau marina, so we asked them to leave ours with them. It was great to get out on the lake and start paddling. The water was a bit choppy in the beginning, but the open canoe allowed us to see everything that was going on around us, and everything was pretty clear, except for the clouds. I had never seen clouds like these before. No Name Ridge: It was a pretty good day, but the wind picked up and then died down. I was having a hard time finding food for Denny, and I spent the morning with him, trying to fish for dinner. I had been on the river before, but I had never gone with just a canoe. I met a lot of great paddlers out on the North Fork. Scott Allen from Whitefish, Montana was a great source of knowledge about the river
